THE CENTENARY CELEBRATION

The following is the form of the note addressed by the Secretary of State to representatives of foreign governments in the United States

Department of State Washington, July [illegible] 1873.—Sir: I have the honor to enclose for the information of the government [illegible] a copy of the President's proclamation announcing the time and place of holding an international exhibition of arts, manufactures and products of the soil and mine proposed to be held in the year 1876. The exhibition is designed to commemorate the declaration of the independence of the United States on the one hundredth anniversary of that interesting and historical event and at the same time present a fitting opportunity for such a display of the results of the art and industry of all nations as will serve to illustrate the great advances attained and the successes achieved in the interest of progress and civilization during the century which will have then closed. In the law providing for the holding of the exhibition Congress directed that copies of the proclamation of the President setting forth the time of its opening and the place at which it is to be held together with such regulations as might be adopted by the Commissioners of the exhibition should be communicated to the diplomatic representatives of all nations. Copies of those regulations are herewith transmitted. The President indulges the hope that the government of [illegible] will be pleased to notice the subject and may deem it proper to bring the exhibition and its objects to the attention of the people of that country and thus encourage their co-operation in the proposed celebration and he further hopes that the opportunity afforded by the exhibition for an interchange of national sentiment and friendly intercourse between the people of both nations may result in still greater advantages to science and industry and at the same time serve to strengthen the bonds of peace and good friendship which already happily subsist between the government and people of [illegible] and those of the United States. I have the honor to be, sir, with the highest consideration, your obedient servant HAMILTON FISH

THE VENTURE OF THE GRAPHIC

The enterprise of the Graphic in equipping the well known aeronaut Mr John Wise with a balloon and accoutrements for the purpose of making his much talked of expedition to Europe [illegible] a young journal [illegible] the Herald will [illegible] talked about when the success of this [illegible] venture [illegible] But if it should fail to succeed, well, it will not be all the same to the Graphic but nevertheless provided the thing is [illegible] the proper [illegible] of public interest excited the speculation may prove not unprofitable

We have never been able to share the confidence of Mr Wise in his theories about upper regions of stationary atmosphere which do not revolve with the great round globe. If there are such breezes as they are so far removed that only dead men can reach them. It may be rash thus to express an ignorance on the eve of the great experiment, and within three months we may be contemplated as was the [illegible] [illegible] demonstrated that a steamship could not cross the Atlantic. But we take the risk of [illegible] by the event [illegible] with such grace as we may in the [illegible] of Mr Wise triumph

The smile fled from his face the other day when a waiter in an eating house deposited a beefsteak with trimmings on his shoulders, emptied a cup of coffee into his lap and deposited a tureen of mashed potatoes on his shirt bosom. An Irishman who had been employed at the cemetery some time since went to Washington to draw his pay. After receiving the amount the paymaster discovering a sabre cut in his face remarked "You were in the army during the war?" "Yes," said he. "What command were you in?" "In General Fitz Hugh Lee's command sir." "Did you have the audacity to apply to a federal cemetery for work when you were in the rebel army?" "Yes," replied the Irishman; "I helped kill them so I thought I had a right to help bury them"

There is a race of [illegible] in Maine who believes in getting the good of things while he is alive. He has just erected a large and gorgeous monument to the memory of himself and wife, though neither of them shows the least sign of departing this life for many years yet. Moved at once by artistic and sentiment [illegible] that old gentleman spends his happy days in gloating over that monument and when the simple villagers assemble to gaze upon it he is said to stand proudly upon the school-house steps and superintend the exhibition with condescending and benevolent smiles

A democratic newspaper in London is very savage about the honors paid to the Shah and declares that only a monkey in the Zoological Gardens has exhibited a vestige of manliness and independence. When the Shah attempted to poke this animal with a stick the indignant creature seized it and grinned defiantly at the majesty of Persia. "And thus," philosophizes our newspaper, "shows how superior monkeys are to mayors. Had the Shah kicked one of the latter all the mayors in the kingdom would have envied him the distinction, and regretted that their persons had not been honored by a similar infliction"

Most of the unpleasant characters in history have been whitewashed—the Eighth Henry, Bloody Mary and Richard the Third. Now it is Nero's turn for M Renan has discovered that the Emperor burned Rome for the best of motives. He merely wished to get rid of the old unsightly ruinous buildings, and to replace them by handsomer and more commodious edifices. He did not wish to shock the people as many of their buildings were held to be sacred and so he played the part of a benevolent incendiary. This may be all so but what has M Renan to say of Nero's fantasia on the violin heartlessly performed during the conflagration?

There is not now living a single descendant in the male line of Chaucer, Shakespeare, Spencer, Milton, Cowley, Butler, Dryden, Pope, Cowper, Goldsmith, Scott, Byron, Moore, Sir Philip Sydney or Sir Walter Raleigh; not one of Drake, Cromwell, Hampden, Monk, Marlborough, Peterborough or Nelson; not one of Strafford, Ormond or Clarendon; not one of Addison, Swift or Johnson; not one of Walpole, Bolingbroke, Chatham, Pitt, Fox, Burke, Grattan or Canning; not one of Bacon, Locke, Newton or Davy; not one of Hume, Gibbon or Macaulay; not one of Hogarth or Sir Joshua Reynolds; not one of David Garrick, John Kemble or Edmund Kean

LOVE'S MARTYR

THE MISERIES OF A YOUNG LOVER IN BUFFALO

(From the Buffalo Advertiser)

An incident occurred in this city recently, the painfully harrowing character of which is relieved in some degree by the heroic fortitude and presence of mind displayed by the principal sufferer. A young man—one of the choice spirits of Buffalo's jeunesse dorée—spent the evening with a select coterie in one of the parlors of a Delaware street mansion. His attire was faultless from the tips of his lavender kids to the toes of his neatly polished boots. The occasion was a delightful one to all save one. The breath of June [illegible] with perfume and cooled by the lake breezes, came in at the open windows; there were bright eyes beaming [illegible] strawberries and ice cream and yet our hero was not happy. A heavy weight seemed to press upon his heart; some unseen sorrow weighed down his spirits usually so buoyant. His smiles were forced and sickly [illegible] his efforts at gayety sounded hollow and [illegible] As the evening wore on his mental [illegible] and he seemed to [illegible] at an early hour he quietly withdrew

The Walla Walla Statesman says: "Our farmers are now actively engaged in cutting their grain and from every quarter we learn that the crops are the heaviest ever cut in this valley. All along the foot of the mountains the crops run from fifty to sixty bushels to the acre and some farmers tell us that they will average sixty bushels. With an outward debt and improved means of transportation one or two crops like the present would make all our farmers rich

A NIGHT ALARM IN KHIVA

A correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph [illegible] with the Turkestan corps of the Khiva expedition thus describes a night alarm in the vicinity of Khoja Ata on the 6th of May

We had an alarm at night at 12 o'clock. I had not yet gone to sleep. I took my sword and revolver [illegible] the light and went out [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] went the carriage of the Cossacks until [illegible] but failing to do this they returned [illegible] The truth of this story having been fully ascertained the troops were allowed to go to rest again. One company however was to have a detachment ready to take the field on any emergency. At 3 o'clock all were asleep again. The enemy did not number more than thirty men

Remarkable instances of canine sagacity are generally too much for us, but here is one related by a newspaper in the northern part of this State (which must therefore be true) and which has the appearance of probability. "The other day"—so begins the newspaper, "a gentleman transacting business in this village left his horse attached to a chaise tied under a shed. Remaining with the horse was a coach dog, who took advantage of his master's absence to enjoy a hasty nap in the vehicle. In the meantime the horse somehow broke away from his fastening, and started off at a furious gallop. This awakened the dog, who at once realized the state of affairs, attempted to seize the reins with his teeth, but was unable to do so owing to their being covered with an overcoat. Fortunately however the reins fell from the carriage on to the ground, when the dog with singular presence of mind leaped nimbly after them, caught them in his mouth, reined the horse to a stand-still, and held the reins firmly until he delivered them, with a graceful wag of the tail, to a stranger, whom, under ordinary circumstances, he would not have allowed to approach his master's property."

THE NEWSPAPER

In the [illegible] of the 17th inst appears [illegible] the Rev T. Cuyler's three [illegible] in relation to [illegible] contributed to that paper. His first contribution was in May 1860 and he says that if all the three hundred articles were collected and published in book form they would make seven large volumes. In the four volumes of his miscellaneous writings that have been published many of these articles or the thoughts in many of them have been worked over and made to do service. The books have been reprinted in Great Britain and have become a part of nearly all religious libraries in that country as well as in ours. At least the author says they have never in book form received any such circulation or been so related to the actual wants and events of the times as when they appeared as newspaper articles. He remarks that the question has frequently been asked "Why not devote to the preparation of books the time and labor bestowed upon newspaper articles and thus secure to the thoughts written a more enduring form than the ephemeral issues of a newspaper?" To which the doctor says there are several sufficient answers. First there are already too many books in the world. If all the really useful thoughts were culled out from the books that have been written and the rest burned, a very large proportion of the world's libraries would go to the bonfire. Second there is a species of writing peculiar to the newspaper and most effective when it appears in that form which would be utterly valueless in a book. Everyone has observed the truth of this. Imagine a book made up wholly of the best articles—say Dr Cuyler's—in the best newspaper that you know of, just as they appeared in the paper, what sort of a book would you have? A book that could not be read. Then imagine a newspaper made up of the best portions of the best works you know of, and what for a newspaper would you have? A newspaper that could not be read. The style of writing required for a newspaper is altogether different from that required for a book. It is something not to be described but readily recognized. It is the inspiration of the present, expressed in a manner that befits the present and it is more effective in prepossessing the mind of the reader, and therefore in educating the sentiments of a community than any other means yet tried. As Dr Cuyler says, the attempt to metamorphose a sermon into a newspaper article is an attempt to use heavy artillery in the place where only musketry can be used to advantage. It is "the undertaking to load a Dahlgren gun with a sixty pound shell for a hard riding dragoon, who is in twenty yards of the muzzle."

In this estimate of the sphere and influence of the newspaper, Dr Cuyler appropriately supplements the tribute paid to the newspaper press by Rev Robert Collyer in his recent sermon on newspapers, from which we take this extract:

As the newspaper makes tributary to its purpose the finest results of science and discovery, so also it captures the finest power of the current thought and life. Dr Chalmers said, many years ago, that the best thinking and the best writing of his day was done for the newspaper. It was a perfect wonder to him how such matchless essays as he read every day could be written on the spur of the moment, in the clash and clang of the intensest life of the world, and when each question that came up for discussion had been sprung then and there on the writer. It is not too much to say that the newspaper article on the average is as much better now as the papers are better than those of thirty years ago, on which Chalmers based his wonder. It is the result of this devouring enterprise, fed by ample means, which searches through every corner and cranny of the land for men and women of the finest ability and then fastens them with golden chains as the old Roman conquerors fastened kings each in their own place. And not content with the best thought it secures at the same time the keenest enterprise. It sends news to governments of earthquake and fire, of battles and revolutions far ahead of their own swiftest messengers. It sends one man to the heart of Africa and another to the heart of old Assyria, this to find a lost man and that a lost library, and both do their work as it could not be done apparently through any other agency, and come back to tell all the world what they have done in swift clear sentences which he who runs may read. Nothing escapes this ever present and all present eye, shall I say this elephant's trunk which can pick up a pin or wrench down a pine. It notes the great markets on one page and on the other chronicles a strawberry festival under a church; reports impartially a murder and a sermon, the small gossip of society, the froth and foam on the chalice of life and the vast movements that grow out of all the centuries, and belts the world, for it is the abstract and brief chronicle of the time showing virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure.

A number of the admiring friends of Wm. H. Seward have started a subscription for a colossal statue of "The Auburn Statesman," and have appointed a committee of well known capitalists to contract with Randolph Rogers for the completion of the same. The statue will be sixteen and a half feet high and will occupy a prominent position in Central Park, providing the Park Commissioners will grant the required space. Among those interested in the memorial we notice the names of Thurlow Weed, Richard Schell, William H. Appleton, Rufus Hatch and M. [illegible] H. [illegible]nell. Two hundred and fifty contributions of $100 each have been offered. It is said that the statue will be one of the most magnificent in New York. It will cost when finished upward of $50,000. Eighteen months will be required for its completion.

A correspondent in Baker City writes [illegible] the Republicans desire to [illegible] the nomination for Congress [illegible] a man than Hon. Elijah Whitney? He is well known [illegible] large number of Democrats [illegible] in Eastern Oregon [illegible] party support [illegible] that [illegible] the State [illegible] Republicans [illegible] and the [illegible] with the support [illegible] Whitney would [illegible] prove [illegible]

Professor [illegible] in favor of the claims [illegible] women to all the [illegible] and [illegible] the doors of the new school on Pou[illegible] Island [illegible] both sexes.

THE REPUBLICANISM

In California the Republicans are taking the right ground. The platform adopted at San Francisco speaks out on the question of monopolies taking the side of the people. It is declared that the matter of freight tariffs should be taken hold of and adjusted by the legislative authority. This is the position and the only position to be assumed by any party that professes to act in the interest of the whole community. The legislature is presumed to be composed of men who have no interests to subserve except those of the entire public. There will be individual members as there have been in the past of whom this presumption is untrue but they are usually few in number. Unjust and iniquitous legislation will sometimes be secured by aggregated capital but there will be some legislation at all events that will not be so much by improper influences.

It would be as unreasonable to ask that the legislature pass acts reducing freight charges to a lower rate than would be just to the railways as it is to allow the managers of the road to charge any price they think most advantageous to themselves. The railway company ought to be allowed a reasonable compensation for whatever services they render to the public but they ought not to be allowed to oppress the people who are forced to depend upon them for transportation. No one will deny that in most sections of country through which roads have been constructed they have conferred great benefits upon the people by opening up communication, stimulating existing industries and creating new ones. They have been of little real value to sections of country where facilities exist for transportation by water, because it is impossible to carry freights so cheaply by rail as by water, but in all other places the railway is the harbinger and promoter of progress.

Considerations of public policy, therefore, would admonish us to give all reasonable encouragement to the building of railways, if the higher considerations of justice to those engaged in such enterprises were not sufficient to secure them against unreasonable legislative interference with their business. But the safety of the people demands that the power to enforce the demand for reasonable rates shall be vested in the government and the past experience of these United States has certainly demonstrated that this power so vested will be exercised favorably to the railways rather than to the people. In the future when the principle of legislative supervision shall have been finally established, as it will surely be, the people will still have more grounds of complaint than the railway companies against their legislators for their treatment of the freight question.

Upon this principle the Republicans of California have planted themselves, and are asking the endorsement of the people. Let the Republicans of Oregon have the courage to take high grounds upon all matters that affect the welfare and honor of the State, and they may confidently ask the suffrages of the people of the State.

Apropos of the Seward monument movement we notice that the Commissioners of Central Park New York City have adopted an order ruling that no statue to the memory of any man shall be placed in the Park until five years after the death of the candidate for monumental honors. This seem to reckon on a well known propensity of the race and to have stolen the spirit of their ordinance from Horace.

M Gambetta seems to be the Ben Butler of the French Republic. He illustrates one of the characteristics of the Essex statesman in a little speech to a correspondent wherein he says he is in the fourth act and the fifth will see him President of the French Republic if the curtain doesn't go down. The conditional clause is well put and is a slight evidence of Gambetta's shrewdness.

There is fair prospect of a high old row between the city authorities of Pittsburgh Pa and the Roman Catholics of that city. The former have declared that the removal of a large cathedral is necessary to the extension of certain streets while the latter avow their intention to protect their sanctuary with powder and ball. No casualties as far as heard from.

BURGLARY AT HARRISBURG

HARRISBURG, July 29 1873

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Last night at about [illegible] o'clock an attempt was made to break into the store of Messrs Gerst, May & Co of this place. The parties (four or five in number) it would seem must have been pretty well acquainted with the premises as they commenced to effect an entrance at the northeast corner of the building, from a wood shed adjoining which completely concealed the men at work while two stood guard, one in the rear and the other in front of the store. Thus guarded they proceeded to work with such tools as they had provided for the occasion consisting of an ax, pick, crowbar and a kind of wrench supposed to have been used for drawing spikes [illegible]. Their implements [illegible] the crowbar [illegible] in contact with the brick wall [illegible] awoke Mr. B[illegible] who lives next door and within about twenty feet of the store [illegible] together with [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Miller who were sleeping in the same house. Between the three they had one small pistol and Mr. Isaac Miller [illegible] quietly to the back [illegible] discharged [illegible] [illegible] land.

Col B B Taylor was picked upon as a fit person to consummate the Democratic d[illegible] as dictated to him, and as a [illegible] Mr Thompson is to be the candidate for State Printer and divide the profits with the printer, Col Taylor to be elected and the latter gentleman is to have the honor of being respected as the leading editor of the State. The new company have already commenced [illegible] preparation as Mr Thompson left this city last Sunday for San Francisco for the purpose of procuring a job office.

Our city was again visited by burglars last Sunday night. They entered the residence of Mr J. Holt, Superintendent of the Willamette Woolen Manufacturing Company, and appropriated a valuable gold watch worth [illegible] and two or three pairs of blankets. The amount stolen I am told is $300.

THE SUPREME COURT is still busily engaged and several cases have been submitted to them but as you are about as well posted on their actions as I am I will not attempt to give a synopsis of their actions.

FROM THE TERMINUS

(Olympia Tribune, July 28)

After a lapse of ten days since our previous visit we went to Tacoma again on Sunday and found that a great change had taken place in the meantime. Paths are changing into streets partially so and cheap little buildings are going up in all parts.

Notices were up for preaching in the school house yesterday morning by Bishop Morris and in the Congregational Union tent by Rev. Dr Atkinson in the evening. Dr Lindsley was posted to occupy the tent.

A desk was put inside the Company's store and a shingle outside labelled "Cooke Brothers Bankers" on Friday and business commenced at once. The first check was drawn the same evening by Capt. E. A. Starr, and within four and twenty hours between six and eight thousand dollars had been deposited. A large safe is on the way up from San Francisco. The plans for the future bank building have not yet been drawn.

The topographical survey of the railroad city was finished on Saturday and Capt Eastwick is engaged on the chart. On Wednesday the survey for the location of streets and blocks will be commenced which with the platting will occupy the next six weeks.

Besides the old buildings, barns and wood sheds, all of which have been seized upon, at least six new buildings have been commenced and finished, as many more are in course of construction and probably double that number will be commenced this week. Of course they are all very cheap and not one of them has yet we believe had a chimney erected. Some shelter is necessary for the two or three hundred men there and these are intended for that purpose.

Uncle Benny raised the first staff ever in Tacoma in front of his tent and on a mast in the middle of the street. He has a large flag flying over it already.

A little room on the front street 10x14 feet is vacant but can be secured by anyone willing to pay $20 per month for it.

Lighterage and hauling from the wharf to any part of town costs a dollar and a quarter per ton of forty feet measurement and that terrible price is a reduction of one hundred per cent in the last week.

The French bark Agl[illegible] one of the only vessel in port.

Chinamen are employed in running the mill, a dozen or more of whom are at work.

The first purchases of land that were talked of were 62 acres near the Gallagher mill by the company at $100 an acre and a single acre by a private individual for $500.

CATCH BASINS.—As [illegible] ment of tile for the Stark street [illegible] arrived from Buena Vista [illegible] due this evening, is expected to [illegible] large quantity. Meantime Mr. [illegible] is improving the time by having [illegible] street catch basins at the intersections of the streets with Stark. These catch basins, as the name would imply, are openings to the sewer through which the water on the surface finds ingress and is carried away. The basins are constructed of brick, two feet wide, eight feet long, and nearly as deep as the [illegible]. A partition will separate the [illegible] in such a manner as to allow the water to [illegible] and pass off into the sewer. A PITIABLE CONDITION.—A case of extreme destitution and suffering has just come to light. This Chinaman is reported to be in a very [illegible] condition, being sick and unable to [illegible] his bed, with nothing to eat and no body to wait on him. He was abandoned some time ago by his countrymen and left to [illegible] and death. For some days past the kind [illegible] neighbors in the immediate vicinity [illegible] the poor creature food and [illegible] ministered to his wants. Without [illegible] of such charity doubtless the [illegible] would have perished before now. [illegible] is no one to attend to the [illegible]. Additions are being made to the collections which are already in possession of the persons who are inaugurating the important enterprise. The effort to establish a [illegible] Museum is said to be [illegible] fair measure of encouragement.

The following resolution was presented and on motion unanimously adopted:

AMUSEMENTS.

Harry Edwards, the very accomplished elocutionist and reader, will give an entertainment on Friday evening at Masonic Hall. The entertainment will be given by Mr. Edwards in response to the urgent solicitation of a number of our prominent citizens. The well known and generally acknowledged talent of this gentleman will be sufficient to secure an over flowing house.

FINALLY DECIDED.

It is an old but true saying that a man is known by the books he reads and the company he keeps. This saying is illustrative of the great sewing machine war, in which nearly all the second-class machines have played prominent parts, expending much ammunition and making forced marches, attended with great loss. But our readers have not seen the name of the world renowned GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE flourished before the people in the above connection, and this dignified reserve has established the popularity of the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE now and forever. It stands on its respectability and merits. These machines make the ELASTIC STITCH and SHUTTLE STITCH, and will be sold on installments of $10 per month. W. T. Shanahan, agent, 71 First street.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Beck & Son have removed from No. 129 Front street to their new stand, No. 107 on the same street. It is neat and attractive.

In one of the most suggestive [illegible] Kenelm Chillingly [illegible] Do you think Mitchell was young when he murdered Duncan? Certainly. [illegible] before he was [illegible] that the persons who murder their wealth are generally from twenty to six and twenty, and persons who murder from their motives, [illegible] ambition, are generally about twenty eight. [illegible] Twenty-eight is the usual [illegible] the active season for getting rid of one's fellow creatures—a prize fighter falls off after that age. I take it that Mitchell was about twenty eight when he murdered Duncan, and about fifty four to sixty when he began to whine about missing the comforts of [illegible]. But in any audience understand that [illegible] of years in seeing a three hours' play, or does any actor ever pretend to impress on the audience [illegible] appear at twenty eight in the first act, and [illegible] in the fifth.

AN ANECDOTE OF THIERS.—The Figaro tells an amusing anecdote about the ex-President, who, it appears, gave a dinner on the 22d of May to some Deputies of the Right, one of whom, M. Baragnon, warned him of the fate that awaited him in spite of the eighty majority the Government counted upon. On leaving, the President, M. Baragnon said he should not pay his vote de question for a month, so as not to appear, he said to M. Thiers, to insult your fall. The day before yesterday, being the 22d of June, M. Baragnon kept his promise. M. Thiers was rather astonished but took the matter in good part and entered into a political discussion with his visitor. Among other things the ex-President said, "I have a horror of civil burials, but the incidents which took place at the funeral of M. Brousses have so irritated me that I have a mind to put in my will that I desire a civil interment to see if they dare to refuse me military honors." M. Baragnon replied that this could only give rise to a useless scandal, as M. Thiers would be unable to witness the effect or interpellate the Government.

Some people may become excited over the terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad on Puget Sound, but it does not disturb Beck & Waldman, corner Front and Washington streets, in the least, as they intend to pursue the usual course to their customers, and that is to sell goods at prices which will enable those with limited means to provide themselves with good clothing at a very small outlay of money. Parents should bring their children to this house for neat fitting suits.

HELMBOLD'S BUCHU—the only extract of that wonderful curative shrub that contains its full virtues, is still considered the true specific for Kidney Diseases, Gravel, Diabetis, Calculus, Dropsy and those obscure diseases that undermine life and rob it of enjoyment. Dr. Helmbold, who spent a fortune in making his discovery known, has lived to see it endorsed by the physicians and people of two continents. Remember that it is Helmbold's Extract that cures when all others fail.

The relaxing power of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is truly wonderful. Cases are already numerous where bent and stiffened limbs have been limbered and straightened by it. When used for this purpose, the part should be washed and rubbed thoroughly. Apply the liniment cold and rub it in with the hand.

Upon the health of the teeth depends the purity of the breath. Preserve them unblemished by the use of the famous SOZODONT, that perfectly harmless vegetable preparation, and you will never regret it.

ELIXIR DAMIANA.

Among the new and successful remedies none have excited so much wonder as this great restorer of the vital energies. To Dr. José Zuniga belongs the credit of producing the only reliable extract of the great remedy, which is now producing grand and surprising results, imparting in a wonderful degree fresh and youthful vigor to all who have used it.

THE REV DR. MURRAY'S FARM

[illegible]

A lady correspondent [illegible] columns of the Philadelphia Press with a description of the [illegible] family of the Rev. W. H. H. Murray [illegible] town of Guilford [illegible] a guest. She begins her [illegible]

Modern [illegible] is a big thing, I said to myself, as Mr. [illegible] dashed up to Rev. W. H. H. Murray's stable carriage-house, with its [illegible] harness room, finished in black walnut and white oak, the stars and stripes [illegible] the [illegible] hoofs of our horses, Lady Velvet and Lady Messenger—struck the boards. At the extreme end, opposite the entrance, and therefore the first thing to catch the eye, is a photograph of Mr. Murray, looking able to manage any and all of the twenty-six horses in his stables. The picture is surmounted by his old Adirondack hat, adorned with the flies, so dear to his trout-loving heart, while through the top are two parallel bullet holes, separated by a tiny strip of felt, which was made in response to a challenge from one of the guides in the wilderness, who declared that Mr. Murray could not put two shots, side by side, using only one barrel of his rifle at a time; "My hat needs ventilating, I will do it now," cried Mr. Murray, and he did it. This old and curiously ventilated hat will figure again on Mr. Murray's head during a campaign in the Wilderness this season. Around the interior of the building hang wild fowl from the first London edition of Audubon's Birds of America, pictures of Bonner's Dexter and Rysdyk's Hambletonian, with that exquisite English engraving, "The Village Blacksmith," while the most conspicuous object is the head of a stag, brought down by the hand of Mrs. Murray in the Wilderness. The granary connected with the establishment is on a very large scale, as you will realize when I tell you that Mr. Murray's oats and corn come from the West in car loads of twelve hundred bushels at a time.

The Adirondack room, where I date my letter, is a rural study, in which Mr. Murray can read, write or sleep, and whose key is never out of his possession. It is furnished with a camp bedstead, simple toilet conveniences, a table and books for reference, while the walls are covered with trophies of implements of adventure in the wilderness, for Mr. Murray is, like Nimrod, "a mighty hunter." Here is a telescope rifle, made by Lewis of Troy, N. Y., through which Mr. Murray has seen a turkey's eye at sixty rods. Here are specimens of Mr. and Mrs. Murray's target shooting, duly signed by the judge chosen for the occasion. Here is one that a five-cent piece would cover, through which Mrs. Murray's unerring aim had sent ten balls at six rods; and here is another that a silver quarter of a dollar would cover, through which Mr. Murray, at twenty rods, had sent six out of ten balls.

Sport, Nettle, Jack and Jet are the four dogs of the family with which I made acquaintance in the carriage-house. Jet, black as her name, and graceful as a bit of ebon statuary, is very valuable, being a pointer from the famous unmixed English breed, one of which was presented to Daniel Webster by a British nobleman. Jack, the watch-dog, also black, is a noble fellow, and evidently has Newfoundland and St. Bernard blood in his veins. Nettle, rightly named, a Skye terrier, true to her mission of rat catcher, is, like all terriers, a disagreeable, sharp-voiced, frowsy, useful little thing. Sport, a beautiful creature, with pure white body and mottled brown head, was born in the Adirondacks, and there is always a look of longing for the wildwood in his soft hazel eyes.

The Miss Ida referred to is Miss Ida E. Hull, a sister of Mrs. Murray. She is described as "bright, dark-eyed, in the prime of her teens, as handsome as a girl in a novel, and as good as a girl in a memoir. She can drive any horse on the place, is ready to trot with any orthodox clergyman or run a race with a locomotive. She intends to go by, and has done it in both cases." She has two horses and a colt of her own. "Mrs. Murray," says the writer, "with her delicate features, clear complexion, hazel-gray eyes, abundant brown hair, and slender figure, is one of the most beautiful women I ever saw. She is not only 'a dead shot,' a dashing 'whip,' a bold sailor, a clever artist, a dainty housekeeper, a clever hostess and a thoroughly good person, but she has the 'sweet, attractive kind of grace' of which the poet sings, and the low, soft voice which is so excellent in woman."

A good part of the letter is devoted to a description of Mr. Murray's horses and their pedigree. Live Oak is a magnificent mahogany bay stock horse, worth $10,000. The other horses are Lady Velvet (Mrs. Murray's horse), Oak Leaf, Chip of the Old Block, Gypsey ("the gayest horse on the Boston milldam"), Beauty, Young Gypsey, Lady Golddust, King, Thoroughbred, Jack and Iron Duke (team horses), Culmare (the heroine of "A Ride with a Mad Horse," in Mr. Murray's "Adventures in the Wilderness"), and Ned, "the lion of the stable," for which Mr. Murray has refused $7,000. The correspondent continues:

My visit to Guilford is surely under a lucky star, for there I find domesticated in the family Miss Adamine Sindberg, a Danish artist, whose father holds an office in the war department of Denmark, and who gave his daughter her singular name in honor of his friend, the late Count Adam Moltke. Miss Sindberg, who has great linguistic ability, speaking five languages—Danish, German, French, Italian, and English—had an enthusiasm for our country from her knowledge of its history. Accordingly, she improved the first opportunity to visit it, arriving in Boston about a year ago. Being a worshipper at Park-street, she attracted the attention of Mr. Murray, for whom she made an oil painting of Abdallah, the sire of his three year old Ned, a celebrated stallion owned by David Taggart of Goffstown, N. H., which was so beautiful a picture and so perfect as a portrait and a work of art, that before it had been on exhibition two days she had received orders for half a dozen copies. She is now painting, with equal success, Mr. Murray's Live Oak and Ned. Nor does she confine herself to one branch of the art. Her flowers are scarcely less perfect than the living blossoms. She is a very lovable person, a blonde, with clear blue eyes, auburn hair and the fine inspirational temperament inseparable from genius. "[illegible] Philadelphia [illegible]," she said to me on the night of my arrival, a Danish sentence, the English of which is, I hear that Philadelphia is a beautiful city. Then she told me with so much enthusiasm of the graces and accomplishments of three Philadelphia ladies whom she met last year at Dinsmore's cottage in North Conway, Miss Lathe Gueracy, Miss Eliza Chase and Miss Laura Jones, that I had to draw heavily on my principles to keep from telling her that I knew them all very well, which as a matter of fact I [illegible] of them.

The fine grazing farm [illegible] meadows [illegible] pastures [illegible] cold water, which flows [illegible] with all those, the homestead of Mr. Murray's [illegible] school [illegible]

Wheat in Liverpool: Average California, 11s. [illegible] Club 12s. [illegible]

The lateness of the harvest has checked the demand for coin to move the grain crop, which usually sets in by this time of the year, and hence the call from that direction has made no perceptible impression on this market as yet. Whether the future shall develop a state of affairs as close as was experienced during the fall and winter of '72 is a disputed question, but present indications are certainly more favorable to a more abundant supply of available funds than we had then. Although rates for money are still high, accommodations on first-class paper are more readily secured and lenders are less the masters of the situation. The funds for extensive and substantial enterprise and improvements going on show that our people are enjoying a fair degree of prosperity. All our exchanges from California and the East agree in representing the prospects for a much greater ease in financial circles than we had last year, and it is only fair to presume that we may realize some of the advantages of the better state of affairs in Oregon.

In trade circles there is but little to report of a serious commercial character. Merchants here generally have fair stocks of merchandise on hand, but yet they exhibit no disposition to operate beyond the current wants and necessities of the trade. The amount of business that has been done during the past six months has not been large proportionately, but has been steady and healthy though at low prices in staple merchandise. There has been but very little disposition shown to speculate. On the contrary our merchants have manifested a very conservative disposition in all their operations, being content with a small but sure percentage of profit without dangerous risks, in preference to taking chances with the uncertainties which attend venturesome speculations in the open market.

The reduction of the rate of discount of the Bank of England from 5 to 4½ per cent has produced but little effect upon the American market so far. The closing was doubtless owing to the fact that the demand for Gold for Germany appears to be satisfied, and that no orders for the moment are in the market. Late shipments of Gold from New York have likewise given ease to the English bourse, and as a result, the next Bank statement will probably show an increase of the specie reserve. English papers, just received, are loud in their complaints that the revenue returns for the current financial year, expiring on the 30th of June, show a decrease of nearly £750,000, as compared with the corresponding period twelve months ago, while the quarter's expenditure, from April 1st to June 30th, was £2,198,772 more than that of the preceding year, and nearly £3,000,000 more than the revenue of the last quarter. Hence the returns are regarded as decidedly discouraging, and, to use the language of one of the journals, "they must be accepted as conveying a distinct warning to statesmen, financiers and the country at large."

The Prospects in Grain.

As will be seen in our regular dispatches, the July report of the Department of Agriculture will show that the favorable accounts of the grain crop of the United States this year have not been exaggerated. Throughout all parts of the country the yield is likely to be in excess of last year, when it was fully up to the average. We should perhaps except from this statement our sister State of California, where it is generally conceded the surplus will be one sixth to one fifth less than last year, but her crop last year was a very unusual one, and such in quantity as she is not likely to produce once in a decade.

In view of all this great bulk of grain which the United States will have for export, it becomes a serious question as to whether we shall readily find tonnage and a market of demand for it all and whether the immense yield and the high tariff for freight will not keep prices down as low if not lower than last year. These questions are of much concern to the people of our own State, more especially as our [illegible] from the bread eating nations of Europe and out, as yet, limited facilities for transportation render us peculiarly obnoxious to these disadvantages. Our own State will this year produce perhaps nearly 2,500,000 bushels of wheat, not to mention other cereals, more than will be necessary for home consumption. To carry this surplus would require seventy-eight ships of more than a thousand tons burthen. Present appearances are against our having more than one third of the number of grain carrying vessels here during the season, though, of course, whether inducements for securing cargoes shall induce other ships hitherward not now reckoned on, is a question which the advance of the season alone can determine.

Wheat in the Liverpool market one year ago to-day stood at just about the figures at which it stands to-day. The demand is, however, likely to be better for American than it has been during the past year, owing to a partial failure of the crops in many parts of Europe and the good reputation established by the cargoes sent thither especially from the Pacific coast. Our farmers will realize rather more on their crops than they [illegible] because they will put it to tide water at less cost; but the price in this market, from all present indications, will be but little different from the average price last season. That [illegible] the world over, every one must know who has a good information on that subject, and it is idle for men to say that rates are kept up or [illegible] by manipulations of wheat rings, or merchants and shippers, some of the residents [illegible] a country with so small a population as ours [illegible] of such extended or powerful influence [illegible] the [illegible] markets of the world.

BUTTER—There is a free supply on hand, though the receipts of the past few days have been small. Prices are unchanged; common lots [illegible], while No. 1 for table use [illegible] cents.

EGGS—There have been some very fair lots received recently, and a only temporary demand has kept figures up. We quote to-day at 20@22c per dozen, with some [illegible].

BACON—The offerings [illegible] supplied with the stocks on hand which cannot be shipped to advantage. We quote ordinary lots at [illegible] for shoulders, [illegible] for sides and [illegible] for hams.

CHICKENS—Spring chickens are in fair demand, and for good lots [illegible] are offering $2 [illegible] per dozen. Grown [illegible] choice lots, command $4 [illegible].

HIDES—We quote a moderate demand at [illegible] per lb for green and [illegible] for dry.

WOOL—The week opens with [illegible] slack in the market, though prices are unchanged. We hear of no important transactions to-day. The sale of some 10,000 lbs at 22½ cents delivered at Roseburg depot as noted by us this morning, was certainly a fair one for the sellers as this market now rules, though it can hardly be taken as a standard for the average lots offering here, for the reason that it was an unusually large lot and of choice quality and it is to be placed in the designated warehouse in but thirty days from the date of the sale. We would again call attention of wool growers to the importance of packing their product in a more cleanly, assorted and merchantable shape, as it will not only establish a better reputation and create a greater demand for Oregon wool abroad, but will actually pay them for the trouble on each lot so cleaned as sorted and packed.
